UNIVERSITY PROFESSOR

ABOUT ME

I am currently an Assistant Lecturer (Maître Assistant "A") at Abbes Laghrour University in Khenchela. Holding a Master's degree in Literature since 2012, I have developed strong expertise in literary analysis and the teaching of French letters. With an enriching academic experience since my recruitment in 2012, I strive to share my knowledge with dedication and rigor. My proficiency in both Arabic and French allows me to communicate effectively and adapt my teaching methods to meet students' needs.

EXPERIENCE

- Since 2012, I have been serving as an Assistant Lecturer (Maître Assistant "A") at Abbes Laghrour University in Khenchela, where I specialize in teaching French language and literature. Over the years, I have developed and delivered courses that explore various aspects of literary analysis, criticism, and interpretation, helping students enhance their understanding of French literary traditions and methodologies.
- In addition to teaching, I have actively contributed to academic research in literature, focusing on critical approaches and textual analysis. My work involves engaging with contemporary and classical literary theories to deepen students' analytical skills and broaden their intellectual perspectives.
- Beyond the classroom, I have been involved in curriculum development and academic mentoring, assisting students in their research projects and guiding them in their academic and professional growth. My role also includes participating in departmental activities, organizing literary discussions, and contributing to initiatives that foster a dynamic learning environment.
- My bilingual proficiency in Arabic and French has allowed me to facilitate better communication with students from diverse backgrounds, ensuring an inclusive and effective learning experience. Throughout my career, I have remained dedicated to excellence in teaching, research, and academic mentorship, continuously striving to inspire a passion for literature and critical inquiry among my students.
